

Mennonites in Tiegenhagen Catholic Burial-Plot Purchase Register, 1758-1772

At the end of the Tiegenhagen Catholic parish churchbook containing, among other things, the burial records for 1758-1772, there is also a register of non-Catholics purchasing a burial plot for first-time use. I checked the list of purchasers to see if any of them were not included in the extraction of the burial register by Glenn Penner at http://www.mennonitegenealogy.com/prussia/Tiegenhagen\_Burials\_1757-1770.htm, and a few of them were not.

By comparing the purchase register to the burial register, it is clear that the purchaser was the head of household. Sometimes the purchase was made in the name of the deceased head of household, while other times it was for the burial of a family member. But when no family member is listed in either register, it is not clear if deceased was the purchaser or another person.

When the purchase register included it, I also checked the personal information (names, locations, age, etc.) from the purchase register against the extraction of the burial register. When additional or different information was provided, I noted that and highlighted those piece(s) of information in yellow. Therefore, purchases with yellow highlights were found in the extraction of the burial register also - there is just additional or contradictory information in the purchase register.

The burial register stopped in 1770, although a note at the end of it indicated that it continued in another book. The purchase register continued into 1772, although it was obvious by mid-1771 that the number of people purchasing plots had decreased dramatically. This decrease probably was due to the internal chaos leading up the First Partition of Poland that occurred on 5 August 1772. When Poland seized the territory where the Tiegenhagen parish was located on that date, these Mennonites became subject to Prussian rule and the Catholic church lost its privileged status that had allowed it to collect burial fees from members of any religion.

When a person had a name that seemed Mennonite, I included him in the list, even if no denomination was listed. I did check these against the burial register; and sometimes a denomination for him was listed there, in which case he is not included in this list. Thus, there are almost certainly some "false positives," i.e. people who had common Mennonite names but were not actually Mennonite. But toward the end of the purchase register, the parish priest stopped recording the denomination at all, so I felt it was important to list those who seemed as though they might be Mennonite.

My comments are in [square brackets]. Words in "quote marks" are exact citations from the church book. Other words in the comments column are summaries of comments from the church book. I attempted to spell names and places exactly the same as the original, except that I spelled out the umlaut and the essett. Glenn Penner provided the references to other sources in that column below.

The burial and purchase registers are both found on LDS microfilm #462758.

Ends with the rather forlorn note "stante amplius non solutam" (after this no more paid).
