The following two lists are an accounting of the monies given to the 228 original families that settled in the Chortitza colony for 1 May 1793 (List 1) and 1 December 1793 (List 2). The original settlers were promised loans of 500 Rubles by the Russian government in 1788. These families were given 100 Rubles each as they passed through Riga in 1788. The remainder was to be advanced in amounts of 100 rubles per month during the succeeding four months. In fact the remaining money trickled in over the next several years. In some cases, the amounts given out would have seemed a joke. For example, on 22 December 1789, 50 Rubles were distributed with a mere 26 Kopeks given to each family. The final accounting on 1 December 1793 indicates that nearly every family had received 440 of the 500 Rubles promised (List 2).

A very important aspect of List 1 is that it counts the population of Chortitza as of 1 May 1793. The total population was 1,008, with 514 men and 494 women, in 231 families, living in 8 villages.

The translation of the original Russian documents into German is available for List 1 and List 2.

These lists have been converted into Excel spreadsheets (List 1 and List 2) with first and last names changed into forms more easily recognized. Note that the spellings of the names in the original are in Russian Cyrillic and have no relationship to how these families actually spelled their names.
