Very few genealogical sources are available for the Ignatyevo Mennonite Settlement, so it was a pleasant surprise to find a census for that settlement in the microfilm collection of the Peter J. Braun archive. The taking of this census was, in some way, connected to the Forestry Service (Forstei), and is buried among a collection of Forstei related documents.

The census accounts for 1,389 individuals living in the villages of Nikolayevka, Romanovka, Ignatyevka, Leonidovka and Ekaterinovka. The original census does not include Alexeyevka or New York. The reason for this is unknown to me. For more information on the Ignatyevo settlement see the GAMEO article.

Note that there are two pages for the village of Romanovka and one page for Ekaterinovka which are badly blurred in the microfilm. This is indicated in the translation below.

It should also be noted that the names are taken from a Russian document and were separately recorded by each village administration. They therefore do not necessarily reflect how the person actually spelled their first or family name. Where possible all Russian location names were replaced by the equivalent German names used by Mennonites of that time period.

Two very useful genealogical aspects of this census are the inclusion of the patronymic for the household head, as was the custom in Russia, and the name of the village in which the household head was registered in the last Russian census (Revision List). This is not the Russian census of 1897. The last Russian revision list was supposedly done in 1858, but that predates the births of many household heads. More information is needed.

Editorial comments are in square brackets. Numbers for the household heads, as found in the GRANDMA database, are included, if known with some degree of certainty.
